

Kathy Young

Kathy Young is the CEO and cofounder of the Tri-Valley Nonprofit Alliance (TVNPA), a premier hub dedicated to fortifying nonprofit organizations. With a professional background spanning various sectors, Kathy boasts years of unwavering commitment to community development. Her strategic insights, coupled with a deep understanding of community dynamics, have positioned TVNPA as an indispensable resource for nonprofits in the Tri-Valley region. Under Kathy's leadership, the alliance offers resources, education, and collaboration platforms, ensuring local community initiatives achieve maximum outreach and efficacy. Kathy's proficiency encompasses areas such as organizational growth, strategic alignment, community engagement, and partnership development. A true believer in the power of collective action, Kathy remains steadfast in her mission to elevate community endeavors through the strength of the nonprofit sector.

Before creating TVNPA, Kathy held pivotal roles in prominent organizations, such as the Hertz Foundation, where she executed successful initiatives, developed cutting-edge programs, and forged robust alliances with pivotal community stakeholders.

A recognized voice in the nonprofit realm, Kathy is frequently invited as a speaker and influencer in various forums. Fueled by a belief in collective betterment, Kathy remains dedicated to amplifying the reach and resonance of philanthropic endeavors.

Kathy received her B.S. in Organizational Behavior and Leadership from the University of San Francisco. Kathy is a resident of Livermore and she spends her leisure time with her husband, Edward, three children, her grandchildren, and her two dogs.